The Judiciary's recovery court program operates within the Superior Court to address non-violent drug addicted offenders.

The program requires completion of distinct phases of intensive drug and alcohol treatment and recovery. This level of supervision permits the program to support the recovery process but also allows the recovery court team to react quickly to impose appropriate therapeutic sanctions or to reinstate criminal proceedings when participants do not comply.

Drug Court name changed to Recovery Court in January 2022.

Will Recovery Court Work for Me?

For more information about the adult recovery court program, go to www.njcourts.gov and search for recovery courts.

Is recovery court a “set up”?

You might have been told that recovery court is a set up. Recovery court is a program that helps people who are abusing drugs and alcohol and have been convicted of a crime. Recovery court programs have been successful for many people like you. Recovery court can help you get your life back.

Will I be accepted into recovery court?

To participate in New Jersey’s recovery court you must have an established New Jersey residence and have been assessed by a recovery court team. You can’t participate in recovery court if you have previous convictions or pending charges for a violent offense. If you have any questions, speak with your attorney.

How long will I be in recovery court?

That is up to you. The goal is for you to complete the program within three years.

Drug testing

Frequent random drug testing is just one of the ways the recovery court team helps you in your recovery. Drug tests can be taken at probation, at court sessions or at other approved locations. You can be sanctioned if you use drugs or alcohol after having stable recovery or if you alter drug tests.

Your probation officer

Your probation officer will help you achieve your goals and succeed in the program. You will meet with your probation officer in the probation office. Your probation officer also will visit you at your home and at your workplace. Tell everyone in your home and your supervisor at work that your probation officer will be visiting. You will be supervised in the county where you live.

Where will I go for treatment?

Based on what you need, you could be placed in different types of treatment. Treatment providers will assist you in your recovery by conducting group and individual sessions with you. Treatment providers are a part of the recovery court team. It is important that you attend all treatment sessions that are scheduled for you. You do not have to pay for treatment; it is funded by recovery court.

What about employment and school?

While in the recovery court program, the team can work with you to get a job and continue your education. Many participants can have their driver’s license reinstated or get a driver’s license for the first time. Think about the personal goals you want to achieve and we can help you reach them.

Court sessions

At the beginning of the recovery court program, you will attend court weekly. You will attend court less often as you progress in the program. You must be on time for court.

Peer support group meetings

During your time in recovery court, you will be asked to establish a clean and sober network. You can do this by attending self-help meetings such as Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) or Narcotics Anonymous (NA). Your treatment provider will discuss self-help meeting options with you.

Sanctions and incentives

If you don’t follow the rules of recovery court, you can expect to receive certain sanctions. If you have done particularly well in certain areas, you can expect to receive an incentive or reward. Whatever you do, do not get discouraged and quit - that will not help you get your life back. Only working through the hard times will produce results.

Just because you miss a meeting or test positive for drugs or alcohol does not mean you will be terminated from the program. We will work with you. We want you to succeed.

Will my record be expunged after I graduate?

If you are eligible, your record could be expunged after you graduate from the recovery court program. Expungement is not guaranteed and not everyone who graduates is eligible for expungement. Your attorney can tell you at the time of sentencing if you are eligible.
